PEDESTRIAN SAFETY CAMPAIGNS PAY OFF

Pedestrians Either Safer or Smarter Than They Were 20 Years Ago

REDUCED GREAT DEAL

Police To Prosecute More Severely Drivers Causing Accidents in The Borough

"Bristol police are going to prosecute the offenders more severely in the future," stated Chief of Police Linford Jones, today, in speaking of the great increase in highway accidents in Bristol Borough.

"There have been too many accidents lately," the chief continued.

"Someone is always wrong" (when an accident occurs), he added as he emphasized that the penalty in the future will be more severe.

Are pedestrians safer today than they were 20 years ago?

They're either safer or smarter—or both—according to traffic safety specialists who have studied the pedestrian tolls of 1930 and 1950 and noted the changes in accident patterns that have taken place during the last two decades.

Intensive safety education campaigns, directed continuously at pedestrians, apparently have paid off in a big way, with large numbers of lives saved among those who walk. This is especially true among children under 15 years of age, who comprised more than a third of those killed by automobiles 20 years ago, the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies points out. Drivers and passengers, however, are not nearly as safe as they were in 1930, and much greater education of motorists in safe driving practices is urgently needed to reduce their accident toll similarly, safety leaders declare.

Pedestrian fatalities have been reduced to about one-fourth of the

LEAP YEAR'S PROGRESS

A month of the current leap year has passed, and there is no visible evidence that the girls are taking advantage of the prerogative it traditionally bestows upon them and popping the question. Perhaps, as has been suggested, the modern female does not require the aid of the calendar in achieving the desired results.

The leap year custom began in Scotland in 1288, when a law was passed stating any single girl could propose publicly—publicly, it said—to any man not married or engaged. If the fiend was so rude as to refuse, he was eligible for a fine.

Laws like this one were passed later in France and in the 15th Century the Italian cities of Genoa and Florence followed suit.

In their basic meaning, however, Leap Years have absolutely nothing to do with marriages, proposals, men or women.

In Caesar's time the calendar was three months behind, accounted for by the extra six hours in each year which add up from the earth's travel around the sun. It takes 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 46 seconds for this route, and the time left over mounts and has to be used up somewhere.

So Caesar set things ahead again, since by his time months supposed to be fall were really winter, and that wouldn't fit his battle and vacation schedules.

This adjustment—he decreed every fourth year should have 366 days—took care of things for some time. But, by 1582, things were out of kilter again.

The calendar was 10 days off, since Julius Caesar had automatically supposed the year to be just six hours longer than 365 days—(are you following all this?) This—encyclopedias state—is too long by 11 minutes and 14 seconds, or one day in every 128 years.

Pope Gregory, back in 1582, ordered October 5 changed to October 15, and decided that century years—those with the '00s—should not be leap unless they are exactly divisible by 400.

This is the system still in force—known most familiarly as the Gregorian calendar. Even it is not perfect. The Gregorian method exceeds the length of a true year by 26 seconds each year.

So, if you wait around long enough, this will amount to an extra day in 3,323 years but nobody has yet decided to figure out a solution to this problem.

Chinese demonstrating against the United States carried a sign, "A teeth for a teeth." Obviously the plural of resentment.

It is now asserted 100,000,000 new homes are needed in the world. It was inevitable that the U. S. Treasury should be put to the ultimate test sooner or later.

Foreigners visiting this country say neither cinema nor fiction expresses the real America. They regard the Treasury in Washington as much more eloquent.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29. In his odd dissertation on the virtues of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., endorsed the Truman Administration's foreign policy.

Lodge said that present policies are sound and that the real fault is not with what we are trying to do, but that Mr. Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson fail to support their own program. Since Lodge was in San Francisco at the meeting of Republican National Committeemen representing the General, it can only be assumed that Eisenhower believes the same thing. If so, he would be a better candidate for the Democrats. What Lodge said really is that Eisenhower and his backers are satisfied over Korea, unperturbed over the fact that the President's blundering caused the loss of China to the Communists and that for the 100 billion dollars we have doled out to the world since 1940 we now are in fine shape. I don't think so, and neither did the majority of GOP politicians who attended the sessions. Many of them didn't react publicly to what Lodge said for at least 24 hours, but when they did they started looking for the exits. They have all been on this merry-go-round before. Twice, in fact, and both times with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York.

Dewey was a little less blunt than Lodge in his shadow boxing with the Administration, but no one ever doubted that he had accepted the thesis that the U. S. A. should be the world's Mr. Fixit. He is in Eisenhower's corner this time, and probably is responsible for Lodge's total absorption of the President's foreign policy. Just so you won't get the idea that Lodge, in speaking for Eisenhower, represented what the Republicans wanted to hear out here, I'll enlighten you on what Senator Harry Cain, of Washington, had to say.

Cain wrapped up the majority of GOP thinking on the Administration's blundering in a tough speech that ripped the Truman-Acheson foreign policy into shreds. When he did he got a roaring ovation from the National Committeemen—the same people who just sat and listened politely to Lodge.

Cain teed off on the blundering in Korea as a starter and then rattled White House windows with his denunciation of Mr. Truman for his crude firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He got a standing ovation for that one. And listeners were still on their feet when he said:

"We must demand of the President and Congress that never again will our people be forced into an undeclared war; and never again permit ourselves to be forced into conflict where the goal is anything short of total victory."

Cain reminded them that half the free world was sold out by the Administration Communists, political ward heelers and their striped pants pals from Harvard University Law School. He refreshed their memories with the fact that more Americans were wounded or had died in Korea in 1951 than in the first three years of World War II.

There wasn't much left to be said by Lodge or anyone else after this. Cain had done what the Eisenhower politicians hoped no one would do. He gave the Republican party its choice again of fighting or snuggling up to Truman and Co. The Eisenhower crowd thinned out considerably when confronted with the choice. Most of the Republicans here walked around with a chip on the shoulder. They were sore about the state of the nation and said so. They were disinclined to the idea of getting back in bed again with the Democrats, even if that is the most comfortable way to stay in politics.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

FOR a good, hearty meal on the Sunday dinner table, the A & P Service for Homemakers suggests Pork Chow Mein. It's both economical and appetizing.

For four servings, get one and one-fourth pounds of end pork chops. Remove the bones and cut meat into slivers. Fry slowly in heavy skillet until browned. Add one cup thinly sliced onion and cook three or four minutes. Add one and one-half cups diced celery, one cup water, one-half teaspoon salt, and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Cover and cook for two minutes. Add one No. 2 can bean sprouts and two tablespoons cornstarch mixed with one teaspoon dark molasses and three tablespoons soy sauce. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Serve over heated noodles from one No. 2 can of fried noodles, with three cups of cooked rice.

Dessert Dumplings smothered with caramel sauce make a sweet companion to the big dish. For the dumplings, sift together one cup sifted flour, one-fourth cup sugar, one teaspoon baking powder and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Add one tablespoon melted margarine and one-third cup milk. Mix only enough to dampen flour.

Meanwhile, make the caramel sauce by cooking one-fourth cup sugar slowly in skillet until golden brown. Add one cup boiling water, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla and one tablespoon margarine. Boil two minutes. Drop dumpling batter into sauce from tablespoon. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Serve dumplings warm with the sauce.

When Your Tot Begins To Creep

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

WHEN a baby begins to creep, he is fascinated by small things he may find on the floor—buttons, splinters, pins. The first thing he does on finding such is to put it into his mouth. Even after he can toddle he may continue doing so. However good a housekeeper the busy mother is, she can't keep all these small articles off the floor.

If you are right with the baby when he finds a small object, you can intercept him. Better still, you can persuade him to hand it to you. Then if you will respond with a smiling "thank you" or caressing pat, he may grow more ready to give you such small things, even to bring them to you for a reward.

Good Idea

A certain mother hit upon a good idea. She cut a slit in the top of an empty coffee can, picked up a few pins she had purposely strewn on the floor, dropped them into the can and rattled it. Soon her little child happily substituted the can for his mouth in which to put small objects he found on the floor.

But the average mother faces this problem after the baby has had considerable bad practice. Naturally, she proceeds to recover the object. She may be a bit excited and hasty and thus cause resistance in the youngster. Later, on seeing her approaching to retrieve some object in his mouth, he may creep or run away as fast as he can. He continues to contrive new ways to outwit her. Following this pattern as he learns to run freely and climb about the house, he finds larger things, including those with cutting edges and sharp points, like knives and scissors.

Practiced at trying to avoid having the alluring dangerous object wrenched from him, he may fall upon it and be seriously injured. He's more likely to fall because of the exciting situation. Also, when he has climbed to a dangerous place, he may, as his excited mother shouts at him or approaches him, lose his balance and fall.

You can see how important it is in all such instances for you to be very calm so as not to arouse resistance or efforts at escape in the youngster, but to cultivate instead his ready cooperation. When you must take something from his mouth or hand against his will, do it as gently as possible. Take plenty of time. Think always of the next time, and try to prepare yourself and him for it.

Best Results

In all the foregoing types of situations you should avoid the very suggestion of rebuke or punishment, if you want to obtain best results. Punishment might be effective if you always could see him right at the moment when he is about to seize the larger dangerous object or put a smaller one into his mouth. But you rarely see him until after he already has the object, and then he feels that what he has is his, and tries hard to keep his possession.

Winning cooperation of the baby or tot in these types of dangerous situations also lessens stubbornness in him in hundreds of other situations. The simple principle is to avoid making painful, but to make pleasant, his cooperation.

FARM GIRLS

WASHINGTON—(INS)—A group of social workers who met in Washington recenty, decided that rural families should make life more attractive for their daughters if they want to keep the girls on the farm. At the conference sponsored by the Agriculture Department, it was reported that girls are deserting the farm in far greater numbers than their brothers are.

utility pole and rolled over. The driver was William J. McKeone, of 7000 block of VanDyke street, Philadelphia. Earl Stephens, of 4500 block of Vista street, Philadelphia, was riding with him. The two were taken to Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia, by a passing motorist, treated and released. Damage to the car is $800, and to the Philadelphia Electric Co. equipment, $350, according to Chief Rentz.

The second accident in Bensalem township took place at five o'clock last evening on Route 13, just east of St. Francis Industrial School, Eddington. Two vehicles were involved and five persons were hurt.

A sedan operated east by John J. Loughrey, 19, of 2300 block of E. Somerset street, Philadelphia, in passing another machine skidded, according to Rentz's investigation. The rear of the Loughrey car was then struck by a truck being operated west by Carl R. Schneiweis, 42, of N. Wilton street, Philadelphia. The Sweeney girl, Moore and Lamina were all riding in the rear seat of the Loughrey vehicle. They were treated at Harriman Hospital, Bristol. Two others riding in the machine were unhurt. Loughrey was shaken up. Damage to the two vehicles is listed at $1000.

John R. Scancella, 16, of 1024 Wood street, was held for a coroner's jury at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Anthony Niccol, here, yesterday. Scancella was the driver of the car which fatally injured Joseph David Tomlinson, 60, of Emilie-Fallsington road. Scancella, along with Ralph Liberty, 16, of 1200 Pine Grove street, and Wayne Bobbs, 15, of Shades Alley, were taking a ride before reporting for classes at Bristol high school at 9.20 yesterday morning. The Scancella car skidded into one operated by Tomlinson on Route 13 at Pine street. Tomlinson was pronounced dead upon arrival at Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia. Scancella is under $1000 bail, charged with involuntary manslaughter.

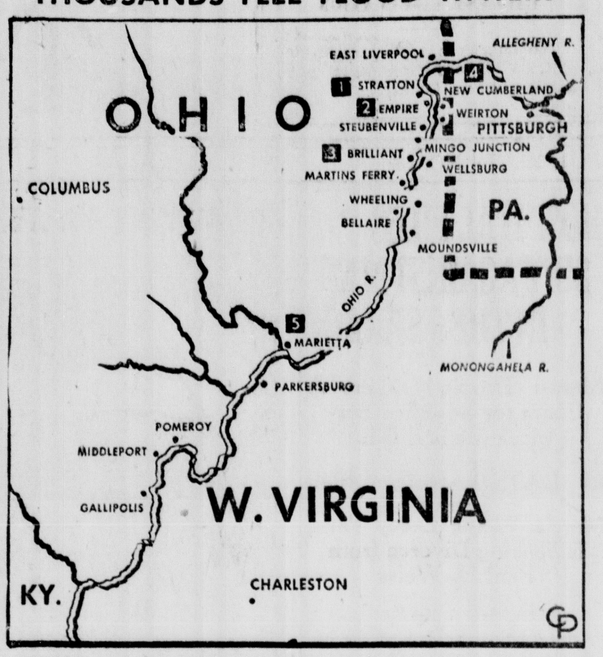

Bucks County Rescue Squad took those injured in the Route 13 accident to their homes after treatment at the hospital.

SECRET SHIP

LONDON—(INS)—British naval experts predict that the new 36,800-ton naval aircraft carrier Ark Royal will be a "ship of a hundred secrets" when it is commissioned in 1953. The new fleet aircraft carrier will replace the famous Ark Royal which German Minister of Propaganda Goebbels "sank" seven times on the radio before the vessel was finally torpedoed in the Mediterranean in 1941.

Col. Charles Lindbergh received the first Distinguished Flying Cross awarded by the U. S. Government.

At New Cumberland (4) fifty families were moved to a church atop a ridge, while at Marietta (5) a state of emergency has been declared. The Ohio National Guard has been placed on the alert.

annual motor vehicle toll, compared with nearly one-half two decades ago, despite the fact that the nation's population has grown sharply and there are some 20,000,000 more automobiles on the roads. In 1950, for instance, nearly 6,500 fewer lives were lost in pedestrian accidents than in 1930, the toll having dropped from 15,850 in 1930 to 9,400 in 1950.

Fatal accidents among children under 15 years old have had the biggest drop, from 37 per cent of pedestrian fatalities 20 years ago, to 15 per cent in 1950. In 1930 more than 5,900 victims were under 15, compared with 1,440 in 1950. Safety specialists declare that this decline strongly reflects the value of pedestrian safety work among grade school children. Greater efforts in this direction, they say, can reduce the toll among children still further. Fatalities among the during the asme 20 years from 63 per cent of total pedestrian deaths in 1930 to 85 per cent in 1950.

Acts of pedestrians that cause death or injury have undergone some significant changes, the records show. The leading cause of pedestrian fatalities still is crossing between intersections. Accidants at intersections rank second. These accidents include crossing at intersections with the traffic signal, crossing against it, crossing where there is no signal, and crossing diagonally. Fatalities at intersections where there is no signal showed the biggest increase percentage-wise, jumping from 8.1 to 13.5 per cent, while a sharp decline occurred in deaths which occurred while crossing with signals, from 8.5 to 2.8. Fatalities while walking on rural highways moved from fourth to third rank in point of frequency, with 1,845 deaths, or 11.9 per cent of the pedestrian toll in 1930, compared with 1,220, or 13.9 per cent, in 1950.

One of the biggest declines, both numerically and percentagewise, was in fatal accidents among children playing in the street. In 1930, this was the third most frequent type of pedestrian fatality, with 2,310 deaths representing 14.9 per cent of the toll. In 1950 it had moved down to fifth place, with the number of deaths while playing in the streets dropping more than 75 per cent to 540, or 5.8 per cent of all pedestrian deaths. Injuries among children playing in the street, however, remain third in frequency.

Walking from behind parked cars into the path of an oncoming vehicle ranked fifth in 1930 and fourth in 1950 in pedestrian fatalities, indicating that campaigns against this common unsafe practice are taking hold. But one of the biggest and most encouraging declines in casualties has happened in accidents involving riding on or "hitching on" to vehicles, the highway safety experts declare. Against 402 fatalities of this type in 1930 there were only 60 in 1950. There were only 2,100 injuries in this type of accident in 1950, compared with 5,610 in 1930, indicating that schools and parents have educated children against the dangerous practices of "seading a ride" or hitching a sled or play wagon to an automobile.

MORE EFFICIENCY IS OF GREAT AID TO THE HOME-MAKER

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

With more women going into defense work there will be less time for tasks at home. This will mean more efficiency in doing household work to keep homes running smoothly and family members happy.

When work takes you outside the home, make homemaking a team job and let every one in the family help. When each one assumes responsibility for his or her own picking up, it reduces the amount of straightening up one person must do.

Other suggestions for improving efficiency are: Study each task to see if there is an easier, quicker way of doing the job satisfactorily. Have a place for everything. When through using an article or piece of equipment put it back in its proper place.

Another thing you can do is arrange a convenient filing system for the business of the home. You will save time when it is necessary to look up bills and receipts.

Plan meals in advance and post menus on a bulletin board or where they can be seen easily. This makes it possible for any member of the family to start preparing the meal when it is time. When you plan meals in advance, you will find it easier to make out your shopping list and do your marketing.

Buy with great care. Check with the salesman to see that you are getting the kind of article you want. Returning articles for exchange takes time and energy.

That Last Touch Of Grooming

Courtesy Parfums Corday

Choose a special perfume, one that's yours alone, always you. A few drops of fragrance on your furs will last a long time.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF a woman is a bit bewildered as to what perfume she should wear, let her purchase several of those tiny little purse containers. They are a good buy and will give her a chance to try out different scents without investing in larger vials.

Because the chemistry of each person's skin may slightly change the character of perfume, test the fragrant liquid on your skin before making a purchase. Scents are funny that way. Friction a few drops on the back of your hand, wait a few minutes until the alcoholic content has evaporated, then take a long, deep breath. If it has an appeal it will make you feel like a million dollars.

Perfume is the last touch when grooming. Friends and acquaintances you meet will enjoy it, will tell you that you "smell sweet" and you will know that you have found your own personal fragrance.

By carrying a purse-size vial you can give yourself a retouch just as you retouch your lips or powder the impertinent nose. It is senseless of women to always expect perfume "to last." Saleswomen at perfume counters get pretty tired hearing about that. Other things don't last. Why should perfume?

Use an Atomizer

Toilet waters are of reasonable price. Keep yours in an atomizer, spray your neck and shoulders. Bath salts not only soften the water but a little of their fragrance will cling to your skin. Sachets are remarkably inexpensive. Tuck them in coat pockets. Pin them in your brassiere. Place them in dresser drawers. Put them on coat and dress hangers.

Cool scents are best for summer, of course. In cold weather you can use a heavier aroma. A few drops on furs will keep on the job for a long time. Woolens have a way of making perfumes work longer, too. But don't tip the bottle on your silk frock; it may leave a stain, especially on light-colored fabrics.

Pennsbury High School

Saturday evening, the Senior class of Pennsbury High School presented the Senior Ball. This semi-formal affair was held in the Pennsbury High gymnasium, and was quite an honor for the seniors, because it is the first dance ever to be held in the new school.

Committees for the ball included: Decorations, Jeff Watts, chairman; tickets, Janet Dansbury, chairman; refreshments, Vivian Drews, chairman, and publicity, Patricia Taylor, chairman.

The faculty advisors for the ball were Miss Pearl Ronkin, Miss Isabelle Creagmile, and Mrs. Helen Hill.

Several new cheerleaders have been added to the Pennsbury High varsity cheering squad. They are: Marye Fuller, Veronica Krueger, Mary June Stryker and Gail Matlack.

Going to press this week is the 1952 Pennsman, yearbook of Pennsbury High School, Yardley. Co-editors are Chris Wiegand and Don Williams.

All art work which has been done by Helen Sheperd and Chris Wiegand, centers around the falcon, school emblem.

An important feature of the book will be the photography which, with the exception of the senior pictures, has been handled entirely by students under the direction of photography editor, Anthony Ragolia, and faculty advisor, Arthur Krespach. All developing and printing of pictures has also been done by the students.

The cover will be metallic silver in color with blue over-tones.

The staff of this year's book have had to do much more work than previous staffs since to save money they undertook to lay out the book to the last detail and figure copy count for themselves.

The business members have to date secured 21 pages of advertising and 350 subscriptions.

Members of the 1952 Pennsman editorial staff are: Anthony Scancella, make-up editor; "Rod" Patton, reporter; Nadya Freidl, senior editor; and Helen Shepherd, art editor.

Bensalem Township

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 29—As of the beginning of the 1951-1952 school year, the elementary division of the Bensalem Township Schools have secured the part-time services of a physical education instructor.

The teacher, John Messinger, is also on the faculty of the high school where he has charge of the safety education program. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, Mr. Messinger teaches games activities in the grades of the upper division of the elementary schools. His time is evenly divided among the schools at Andalusia, Cornwells Heights, Penn Valley and Trevose.

Believing that physical education is an integral part of a child's education, the school administration initiated this type of program for the benefit of the elementary children. The type of games and activities naturally depends upon the age group.

Mr. Messinger is of the opinion that the teaching of skills and good sportsmanship is of more importance than the actual learning of the major sports. The children look forward to Mr. Messinger's visits. He has supervised activities for playground as well as a store of ideas for indoor games during periods of inclement weather.

Through the work of Mr. Messinger the children have learned to appreciate the value of physical education instruction and to realize the significance of a healthy mind and body.

Wayne Engle, a sophomore elementary education student at Danbury Teachers College, Danbury, Connecticut, is spending the college interim program in Bensalem Township where he is working under the supervision of Mrs. Elsie Morgan, elementary supervisor.

The interim program of Danbury Teachers College is a three week period when underclassmen leave the college and engage in work experiences where they will gain valuable experience that they wouldn't otherwise gain in the classroom. Mr. Engle has spent time observing the methods and techniques of teachers in the school district.

Mr. Engle, a 1950 graduate of Bensalem High School, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester F. Engle, of Andalusia. At Danbury, Mr. Engle is editor-in-chief of the campus newspaper, The Couirer, on the staff of the college yearbook, and a member of the executive committee of the Sophomore Class.

Mr. Engle's previous interim experience was with the Children's Department of the Danbury Library.

Pupils in the sixth grade of Miss Isabelle McCoy, Trevose School, are engaged in a very interesting social studies project stated, "How the Geography of South America Has Affected Man's Way of Living."

The thirty-five pupils of the class are divided into several groups, each having a specific topic on which to report. Time is given to the pupils during the week to work on these reports.

By means of pupil maps, drawings and charts, as well as pictures from periodicals, the children hope to learn a great deal about their South American neighbors. Pupils are even going so far as to model from clay, various articles and tools of this continent. The building of the native huts is also on the agenda.

Sixth grade Trevose pupils cannot help but be well-informed on every day happenings—locally, national and international! As part of their daily program, pupils hear about the current news topics of the day. Students bring in the daily papers and from them they keep abreast of world events.

Recently, the exploits of Captain Carson and the snow-bound streamliner, "City of San Francisco," were studied in their entirety. Pictures were posted on the blackboard and daily the latest photos were added to the collection.

Not too slim, not too plump, just right! That's Movie Star Virginia Mayo, whose figure skinny girls can envy.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SLENDERNESS seems, these days, to be synonymous with beauty. The plump girl deplores her budges, and well she might. She can delete them if she will stop feeding her fat cells, live on a diet that is fairly free of fats, sweets and starches. It just means a little self denial, not going weak-kneed when the chocolate eclairs are passed, being content with fruit in place of rich desserts.

But you can't be beautiful and be too thin either. The body must not display a bony prominence—sharp elbows, scrawny neck, collar bones that form little shelves. The skinny girl is far from the ideal. She usually lives on nervous energy. She should stoke up on substantial viands that will put fat on her ribs. Stick legs are nothing to rave about. She can develop the muscles by walking tippy-toe, high kicking, riding a bicycle, dancing.

Outdoor Exercise

Nearly always the emaciated girl is pale and has hollow cheeks. A quart of milk a day and mild outdoor exercise will help bring her to normal weight. Often she has moist palms and cold feet which show that she needs more outdoor life, should air-condition her lungs so the blood streams will travel more briskly.

She can improve facial contour by the right kind of massage. A heavy cream should be used to nourish delicate tissues. It should be applied on a clean skin surface, remain on overnight when the flesh will lap it up.

Fill Out Cheeks

To make the cheeks fill out, place creamed fingers and thumbs outspread over those areas. Bring fingers and thumb together, drawing out the trumpeter's muscles; then, with the thumb—which is placed on the lower part of the cheek—lift the flesh upward. These movements should be followed by a brisk tapping and slapping. It is surprising how a few minutes of massage will bring good coloring. It also has a refining influence if the pores are coarse.

Miss Skinny should get plenty of sleep. That is when Nature rebuilds and recharges energy batteries, you know.

FISHING FIRST

LONDON—(INS)—Littlehampton Council have decided that fishing is of more importance than fiddling. They decided to make a money grant to the local angling society but refused financial help to the philharmonic society.

In the ark with Noah there were four women—his wife and the wives of his three sons.

Educators Discuss A Number of Bills

had been completed. Since assessments had been turned in to the county assessment board on Sept. 1st, many houses, stores, factories have been constructed, it was pointed out. Under Act 544 any property can be assessed for a percentage of the fiscal year. It was felt by the educators that such a bill should have been enacted several years ago. It was pointed out that most districts will be re-assessed now, so that the tax can be paid for this year.

House Bill 163 was also discussed. This bill permits the setting up of local municipal authorities and giving them the same state re-imbursement as received under the state authority.

The superintendents and principals also considered Act 472, which cares for new state appropriation to schools. They discussed how such would affect the schools. In general, it means districts which operate jointly will receive more state aid for elementary schools and less for secondary schools.

ANGRY CHESS

VIENNA — (INS) — Passionate chess-players are the most belligerent people in the world. This astounding disclosure was made by Heinrich Mueller, an Austrian handwriting expert who claims to have made a life-long study of chess-players' handwritings.

CHECKED GUN

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — A youth recently checked a revolver along with his hat at the Tip Top Cafe in Philadelphia. Mary Docherty, the hat check girl, accepted the weapon and called the police. Next day the checker, Sam McCauley, found himself under $500 bail for toting a gun without a permit.

Glenn Curtiss piloted an airplane called the June Bug on the first public flight of a mile in the United States.

Urges Bucks Juniors To Strengthen Their Clubs

LANGHORNE, Jan. 29—The Juniors of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs held a president's council, Thursday evening, in Langhorne community house. Presidents and committee chairmen from nine clubs were present. Mrs. E. Wilmer Fisher, Morrisville, president of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Russell Willoughby, Morrisville; Mrs. Ralph Robinson, Chalfont; and Mrs. J. P. Perry, Furlong, were guests.

Miss Joanne B. Gallagher, third vice-president, Bucks Co. Federation, introduced Mrs. Fisher, who urged the juniors to strengthen their clubs. "With the great influx in population in the county there are many opportunities for expanding," she reminded.

"Youth in the Comunity" was the main topic. The juniors are helping the youth towards their future. Almost all the clubs sponsor Girl Scout and Brownie troops and take an active part in their activities by being troop leaders. One club sponsors a Cub Scout troop as well as Girl Scouts.

Several of the clubs are active in youth center work by chaperoning teen-age dances, running canteens and snack bars, and teaching arts and crafts. Many of the clubs are working in cooperation with schools, trying to establish free kindergartens or buying playground or other necessary equipment. The juniors of Bucks County have a scholarship fund available to high school girls in the county and thus help worthwhile students with a college education they might not otherwise get.

Labor Day is the only national holiday recognized by Congressional action.

THE GUEST OF GOD

"O Lord, who shall sojurn in your tent?
Who shall dwell on your holy mountain?
He who walks blamlessly and does justice:
who thinks the truth in his heart
and slanders not with his tongue;
Who harms not his fellow man, nor takes up a reproach against his neighbor;
By whom the reprobate is despised,
while he honors those who fear the Lord;
Who, though it be to his loss, changes not his pledged word,
who lends not his money at usury
and accepts no bribe against the innocent.
He who does these things shall never be disturbed."

(Psalm 14)

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

HERE is a Sunday dinner of veal stew with dumplings recommended by the A & P Service for Homemakers to fill economy and palate appeal requirements.

Roll two pounds of boneless stewing veal, cut bite size, in seasoned flour. Brown in three tablespoons of fat in heavy kettle. Add three sliced onions, one teaspoon of dried marjoram, three cups of water and the liquid drained from two No. 2 cans of peas. Bring to boil. Cover, and simmer one and one-half hours.

Add six sliced carrots and simmer one-half hour longer, or until carrots and meat are tender. Season to taste.

For the dumplings, sift three cups of cake flour, three teaspoons of baking powder and one and one-fourth teaspoons of salt. Cut in two tablespoons of shortening. Add two tablespoons of chopped parsley and one cup of milk. Mix until flour is moistened. Drop from tablespoon into boiling stew. Cover and simmer 15 minutes.

For vegetables, cook two cups of potatoes, cut in pieces, until tender. Drain and add to drained peas. Heat and season.

Chose your own dessert, but for a salad, try this peach-gelatin combination: Drain juice from one No. 2 can of sliced peaches. Add enough water to juice to make two cupsful. Add one tablespoon each of sugar and vinegar, dash of salt and two whole cloves. Tie one-half teaspoon cracked cinnamon in a small piece of cheesecloth and drop into mixture. Bring to boil and simmer ten minutes. Remove spices. Pour mixture over one package of orange-flavored gelatin dessert. Stir until dissolved. Add peaches. Chill until firm in refrigerator tray, then slice and arrange on salad greens. Serve with cottage cheese and dressing.

Coach Johnny Messinger is depending upon Bob Whitfield, Russ Struble, Joe Mikelatis, Harry Robinson, and Bob Elliott to lead his team to a triumph.

Morrisville will play George School on its home court, while Pennsbury High will be host to Bordentown High.

HOUSES AND PEOPLE

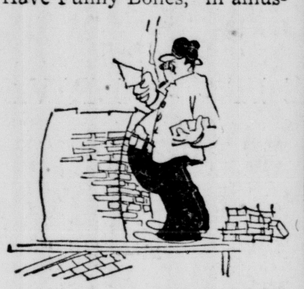

HERE'S A HOME that shows what an architect chooses when it's time to pick a house for himself. It's Royal Barry Wills' home in Melrose, Mass. Mr. Wills, who finds house planning and people fun, tells his adventures in a new book, "Houses Have Funny Bones."

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

IT'S true what they say about meeting such interesting people in the newspaper business. One of them is Royal Barry Wills who, while not a member of the fourth estate, has managed to meet plenty of interesting people on his own.

They march through the pages of his new book, "Houses Have Funny Bones," in amusing array. They are painters, carpenters, clients, of course, and all the other people that help make the adventures of an architect entertaining, especially an architect who has a good sense of humor and a lively imagination.

Royal Barry Wills

A BRICKLAYER with a big stomach can leave his mark on a chimney, as this sketch illustrates.

Probably nobody but Mr. Wills would know a bricklayer like Luigi Pasquadoro, who had trouble building chimneys. His stomach stuck out so far that inadvertently he leaned against the chimney while the mortar was still soft. As a result, most of his chimneys had a curved contour the exact shape of Luigi's stomach.

Then there was the husky driver who appeared at the Wills home one day with a truck loaded with an entire Colonial staircase that Mr. Wills had bought from an old house in Gloucester. It was purchased on the promise that it would be stored in a wrecking yard until needed, but the driver would have none of carting it back. Instead, he dropped it on the front lawn, letting it lean against a tree, where it stayed until neighbors complained about its elephantine proportions.

When it comes to clients, Mr. Wills has had more than his share of unusual ones. A favorite was Mr. Damon, a bit queer and more than a bit absent-minded. He would decide to take a bath, turn the faucets on full force and then go off to do something else, forgetting completely about the running water. As a result, the hall ceiling, directly below, had fallen four times.

His wife finally hit on a solution. Before having the ceiling replastered, she had a carpenter bore several small holes in through the bathroom floor. Little pipes were inserted in these so that the bathtub overflow might run down into the hall without spoiling the ceiling. As an afterthought, she stored a mop and pail in the hall closet.

It was a fine idea until one Saturday when the bathtub overflowed through the pipes just as five of Mrs. Damon's old cronies from the Women's Guild ambled into the hallway and were drenched.

Another wealthy client thought the cost of painting the exterior of a house was too expensive, so she decided to do it herself. When it was time to paint the upper story, her chauffeur rigged a bosun's chair and hoisted her some twenty feet in the air, while he held onto a rope to keep her aloft.

These are only a few of the countless characters you'll find in "Houses Have Funny Bones," a book that people with funny bones are sure to enjoy. The amusing text is illustrated with gay little sketches by Mr. Wills, one of which is reproduced here.

The book should be available at your local book shop; if not they can order it for you.

COLONIAL CHARM in the living room of the Melrose house. It's attractive, but it wouldn't suit such clients of Mr. Wills as the man who decorated every room with shoes boxes bulging with clippings.

MUCH OF HIS TIME, Mr. Wills spends at his country place in Cohasset, Mass., where a huge staircase was once left on the front lawn.

RUGS IN THE COHASSET living room can probably be stepped on safely. Mr. Wills once slipped on a rug, fell through the floor.

Bristol Farmer Has High Tomato Yield

Third highest tomato yield in the entire state was grown by Lawrence Potter, R. D. 2, during 1951. According to Harry J. Garrison, Jr., 237 Green Lane. Potter has consistently been a better-than-average grower.

On 10 acres of good Bucks County land, this prize-winning tomato grower averaged 23.8 tons per acre with 69% of U. S. No. 1's. What does Potter say about his success this past season? "Plenty of cow manure and good weather was the answer," he murmurs modestly.

By trade, St. Paul was a tentmaker.

PEDESTRIAN SAFETY CAMPAIGNS PAY OFF

Pedestrians Either Safer or Smarter Than They Were 20 Years Ago

REDUCED GREAT DEAL

Police To Prosecute More Severely Drivers Causing Accidents in The Borough

"Bristol police are going to prosecute the offenders more severely in the future," stated Chief of Police Linford Jones, today, in speaking of the great increase in highway accidents in Bristol Borough.

"There have been too many accidents lately," the chief continued.

"Someone is always wrong" (when an accident occurs), he added as he emphasized that the penalty in the future will be more severe.

Are pedestrians safer today than they were 20 years ago?

They're either safer or smarter—or both—according to traffic safety specialists who have studied the pedestrian tolls of 1930 and 1950 and noted the changes in accident patterns that have taken place during the last two decades.

Intensive safety education campaigns, directed continuously at pedestrians, apparently have paid off in a big way, with large numbers of lives saved among those who walk. This is especially true among children under 15 years of age, who comprised more than a third of those killed by automobiles 20 years ago, the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies points out. Drivers and passengers, however, are not nearly as safe as they were in 1930, and much greater education of motorists in safe driving practices is urgently needed to reduce their accident toll similarly, safety leaders declare.

Pedestrian fatalities have been reduced to about one-fourth of the

LEAP YEAR'S PROGRESS

A month of the current leap year has passed, and there is no visible evidence that the girls are taking advantage of the prerogative it traditionally bestows upon them and popping the question. Perhaps, as has been suggested, the modern female does not require the aid of the calendar in achieving the desired results.

The leap year custom began in Scotland in 1288, when a law was passed stating any single girl could propose publicly—publicly, it said—to any man not married or engaged. If the fiend was so rude as to refuse, he was eligible for a fine.

Laws like this one were passed later in France and in the 15th Century the Italian cities of Genoa and Florence followed suit.

In their basic meaning, however, Leap Years have absolutely nothing to do with marriages, proposals, men or women.

In Caesar's time the calendar was three months behind, accounted for by the extra six hours in each year which add up from the earth's travel around the sun. It takes 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 46 seconds for this route, and the time left over mounts and has to be used up somewhere.

So Caesar set things ahead again, since by his time months supposed to be fall were really winter, and that wouldn't fit his battle and vacation schedules.

This adjustment—he decreed every fourth year should have 366 days—took care of things for some time. But, by 1582, things were out of kilter again.

The calendar was 10 days off, since Julius Caesar had automatically supposed the year to be just six hours longer than 365 days—(are you following all this?) This—encyclopedias state—is too long by 11 minutes and 14 seconds, or one day in every 128 years.

Pope Gregory, back in 1582, ordered October 5 changed to October 15, and decided that century years—those with the '00s—should not be leap unless they are exactly divisible by 400.

This is the system still in force—known most familiarly as the Gregorian calendar. Even it is not perfect. The Gregorian method exceeds the length of a true year by 26 seconds each year.

So, if you wait around long enough, this will amount to an extra day in 3,323 years but nobody has yet decided to figure out a solution to this problem.

Chinese demonstrating against the United States carried a sign, "A teeth for a teeth." Obviously the plural of resentment.

It is now asserted 100,000,000 new homes are needed in the world. It was inevitable that the U. S. Treasury should be put to the ultimate test sooner or later.

Foreigners visiting this country say neither cinema nor fiction expresses the real America. They regard the Treasury in Washington as much more eloquent.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29. In his odd dissertation on the virtues of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., endorsed the Truman Administration's foreign policy.

Lodge said that present policies are sound and that the real fault is not with what we are trying to do, but that Mr. Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson fail to support their own program. Since Lodge was in San Francisco at the meeting of Republican National Committeemen representing the General, it can only be assumed that Eisenhower believes the same thing. If so, he would be a better candidate for the Democrats. What Lodge said really is that Eisenhower and his backers are satisfied over Korea, unperturbed over the fact that the President's blundering caused the loss of China to the Communists and that for the 100 billion dollars we have doled out to the world since 1940 we now are in fine shape. I don't think so, and neither did the majority of GOP politicians who attended the sessions. Many of them didn't react publicly to what Lodge said for at least 24 hours, but when they did they started looking for the exits. They have all been on this merry-go-round before. Twice, in fact, and both times with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, of New York.

Dewey was a little less blunt than Lodge in his shadow boxing with the Administration, but no one ever doubted that he had accepted the thesis that the U. S. A. should be the world's Mr. Fixit. He is in Eisenhower's corner this time, and probably is responsible for Lodge's total absorption of the President's foreign policy. Just so you won't get the idea that Lodge, in speaking for Eisenhower, represented what the Republicans wanted to hear out here, I'll enlighten you on what Senator Harry Cain, of Washington, had to say.

Cain wrapped up the majority of GOP thinking on the Administration's blundering in a tough speech that ripped the Truman-Acheson foreign policy into shreds. When he did he got a roaring ovation from the National Committeemen—the same people who just sat and listened politely to Lodge.

Cain teed off on the blundering in Korea as a starter and then rattled White House windows with his denunciation of Mr. Truman for his crude firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He got a standing ovation for that one. And listeners were still on their feet when he said:

"We must demand of the President and Congress that never again will our people be forced into an undeclared war; and never again permit ourselves to be forced into conflict where the goal is anything short of total victory."

Cain reminded them that half the free world was sold out by the Administration Communists, political ward heelers and their striped pants pals from Harvard University Law School. He refreshed their memories with the fact that more Americans were wounded or had died in Korea in 1951 than in the first three years of World War II.

There wasn't much left to be said by Lodge or anyone else after this. Cain had done what the Eisenhower politicians hoped no one would do. He gave the Republican party its choice again of fighting or snuggling up to Truman and Co. The Eisenhower crowd thinned out considerably when confronted with the choice. Most of the Republicans here walked around with a chip on the shoulder. They were sore about the state of the nation and said so. They were disinclined to the idea of getting back in bed again with the Democrats, even if that is the most comfortable way to stay in politics.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

FOR a good, hearty meal on the Sunday dinner table, the A & P Service for Homemakers suggests Pork Chow Mein. It's both economical and appetizing.

For four servings, get one and one-fourth pounds of end pork chops. Remove the bones and cut meat into slivers. Fry slowly in heavy skillet until browned. Add one cup thinly sliced onion and cook three or four minutes. Add one and one-half cups diced celery, one cup water, one-half teaspoon salt, and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Cover and cook for two minutes. Add one No. 2 can bean sprouts and two tablespoons cornstarch mixed with one teaspoon dark molasses and three tablespoons soy sauce. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Serve over heated noodles from one No. 2 can of fried noodles, with three cups of cooked rice.

Dessert Dumplings smothered with caramel sauce make a sweet companion to the big dish. For the dumplings, sift together one cup sifted flour, one-fourth cup sugar, one teaspoon baking powder and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Add one tablespoon melted margarine and one-third cup milk. Mix only enough to dampen flour.

Meanwhile, make the caramel sauce by cooking one-fourth cup sugar slowly in skillet until golden brown. Add one cup boiling water, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla and one tablespoon margarine. Boil two minutes. Drop dumpling batter into sauce from tablespoon. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Serve dumplings warm with the sauce.

When Your Tot Begins To Creep

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

WHEN a baby begins to creep, he is fascinated by small things he may find on the floor—buttons, splinters, pins. The first thing he does on finding such is to put it into his mouth. Even after he can toddle he may continue doing so. However good a housekeeper the busy mother is, she can't keep all these small articles off the floor.

If you are right with the baby when he finds a small object, you can intercept him. Better still, you can persuade him to hand it to you. Then if you will respond with a smiling "thank you" or caressing pat, he may grow more ready to give you such small things, even to bring them to you for a reward.

Good Idea

A certain mother hit upon a good idea. She cut a slit in the top of an empty coffee can, picked up a few pins she had purposely strewn on the floor, dropped them into the can and rattled it. Soon her little child happily substituted the can for his mouth in which to put small objects he found on the floor.

But the average mother faces this problem after the baby has had considerable bad practice. Naturally, she proceeds to recover the object. She may be a bit excited and hasty and thus cause resistance in the youngster. Later, on seeing her approaching to retrieve some object in his mouth, he may creep or run away as fast as he can. He continues to contrive new ways to outwit her. Following this pattern as he learns to run freely and climb about the house, he finds larger things, including those with cutting edges and sharp points, like knives and scissors.

Practiced at trying to avoid having the alluring dangerous object wrenched from him, he may fall upon it and be seriously injured. He's more likely to fall because of the exciting situation. Also, when he has climbed to a dangerous place, he may, as his excited mother shouts at him or approaches him, lose his balance and fall.

You can see how important it is in all such instances for you to be very calm so as not to arouse resistance or efforts at escape in the youngster, but to cultivate instead his ready cooperation. When you must take something from his mouth or hand against his will, do it as gently as possible. Take plenty of time. Think always of the next time, and try to prepare yourself and him for it.

Best Results

In all the foregoing types of situations you should avoid the very suggestion of rebuke or punishment, if you want to obtain best results. Punishment might be effective if you always could see him right at the moment when he is about to seize the larger dangerous object or put a smaller one into his mouth. But you rarely see him until after he already has the object, and then he feels that what he has is his, and tries hard to keep his possession.

Winning cooperation of the baby or tot in these types of dangerous situations also lessens stubbornness in him in hundreds of other situations. The simple principle is to avoid making painful, but to make pleasant, his cooperation.

FARM GIRLS

WASHINGTON—(INS)—A group of social workers who met in Washington recenty, decided that rural families should make life more attractive for their daughters if they want to keep the girls on the farm. At the conference sponsored by the Agriculture Department, it was reported that girls are deserting the farm in far greater numbers than their brothers are.

utility pole and rolled over. The driver was William J. McKeone, of 7000 block of VanDyke street, Philadelphia. Earl Stephens, of 4500 block of Vista street, Philadelphia, was riding with him. The two were taken to Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia, by a passing motorist, treated and released. Damage to the car is $800, and to the Philadelphia Electric Co. equipment, $350, according to Chief Rentz.

The second accident in Bensalem township took place at five o'clock last evening on Route 13, just east of St. Francis Industrial School, Eddington. Two vehicles were involved and five persons were hurt.

A sedan operated east by John J. Loughrey, 19, of 2300 block of E. Somerset street, Philadelphia, in passing another machine skidded, according to Rentz's investigation. The rear of the Loughrey car was then struck by a truck being operated west by Carl R. Schneiweis, 42, of N. Wilton street, Philadelphia. The Sweeney girl, Moore and Lamina were all riding in the rear seat of the Loughrey vehicle. They were treated at Harriman Hospital, Bristol. Two others riding in the machine were unhurt. Loughrey was shaken up. Damage to the two vehicles is listed at $1000.

John R. Scancella, 16, of 1024 Wood street, was held for a coroner's jury at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Anthony Niccol, here, yesterday. Scancella was the driver of the car which fatally injured Joseph David Tomlinson, 60, of Emilie-Falsington road. Scancella, along with Ralph Liberty, 16, of 1200 Pine Grove street, and Wayne Bobbs, 15, of Shades Alley, were taking a ride before reporting for classes at Bristol high school at 9.20 yesterday morning. The Scancella car skidded into one operated by Tomlinson on Route 13 at Pine street. Tomlinson was pronounced dead upon arrival at Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia. Scancella is under $1000 bail, charged with involuntary manslaughter.

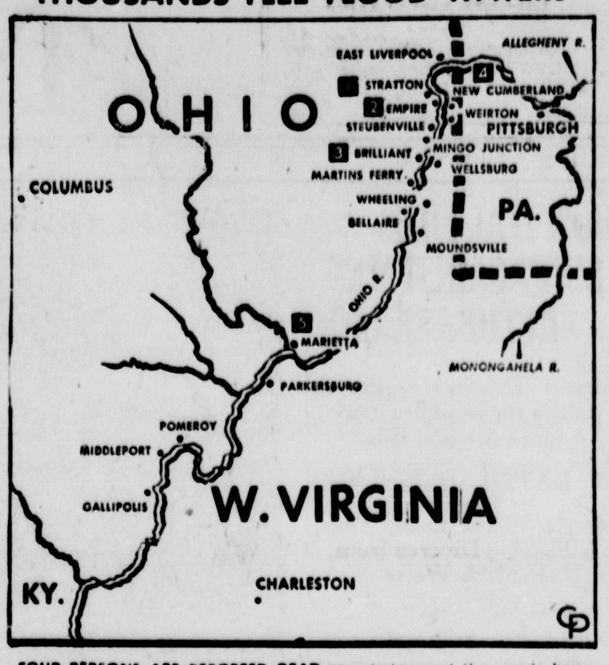

Bucks County Rescue Squad took those injured in the Route 13 accident to their homes after treatment at the hospital.

SECRET SHIP

LONDON—(INS)—British naval experts predict that the new 36,800-ton naval aircraft carrier Ark Royal will be a "ship of a hundred secrets" when it is commissioned in 1953. The new fleet aircraft carrier will replace the famous Ark Royal which German Minister of Propaganda Goebbels "sank" seven times on the radio before the vessel was finally torpedoed in the Mediterranean in 1941.

Col. Charles Lindbergh received the first Distinguished Flying Cross awarded by the U. S. Government.

THOUSANDS FLEE FLOOD WATERS

FOUR PERSONS ARE REPORTED DEAD or missing and thousands have been made homeless as the Ohio River, in the wake of heavy rains and a mid-winter thaw, reached flood crests in many areas. The first mass evacuation on the Ohio came in the twin villages of Stratton (1) and Empire (2). In Brilliant (3) scores have already been evacuated by rescue workers. At New Cumberland (4) fifty families were moved to a church atop a ridge, while at Marietta (5) a state of emergency has been declared. The Ohio National Guard has been placed on the alert.

annual motor vehicle toll, compared with nearly one-half two decades ago, despite the fact that the nation's population has grown sharply and there are some 20,000,000 more automobiles on the roads. In 1950, for instance, nearly 6,500 fewer lives were lost in pedestrian accidents than in 1930, the toll having dropped from 15,850 in 1930 to 9,400 in 1950.

Fatal accidents among children under 15 years old have had the biggest drop, from 37 per cent of pedestrian fatalities 20 years ago, to 15 per cent in 1950. In 1930 more than 5,900 victims were under 15, compared with 1,440 in 1950. Safety specialists declare that this decline strongly reflects the value of pedestrian safety work among grade school children. Greater efforts in this direction, they say, can reduce the toll among children still further. Fatalities among the during the asme 20 years from 63 per cent of total pedestrian deaths in 1930 to 85 per cent in 1950.

Acts of pedestrians that cause death or injury have undergone some significant changes, the records show. The leading cause of pedestrian fatalities still is crossing between intersections. Accidants at intersections rank second. These accidents include crossing at intersections with the traffic signal, crossing against it, crossing where there is no signal, and crossing diagonally. Fatalities at intersections where there is no signal showed the biggest increase percentage-wise, jumping from 8.1 to 13.5 per cent, while a sharp decline occurred in deaths which occurred while crossing with signals, from 8.5 to 2.8. Fatalities while walking on rural highways moved from fourth to third rank in point of frequency, with 1,845 deaths, or 11.9 per cent of the pedestrian toll in 1930, compared with 1,220, or 13.9 per cent, in 1950.

One of the biggest declines, both numerically and percentagewise, was in fatal accidents among children playing in the street. In 1930, this was the third most frequent type of pedestrian fatality, with 2,310 deaths representing 14.9 per cent of the toll. In 1950 it had moved down to fifth place, with the number of deaths while playing in the streets dropping more than 75 per cent to 540, or 5.8 per cent of all pedestrian deaths. Injuries among children playing in the street, however, remain third in frequency.

Walking from behind parked cars into the path of an oncoming vehicle ranked fifth in 1930 and fourth in 1950 in pedestrian fatalities, indicating that campaigns against this common unsafe practice are taking hold. But one of the biggest and most encouraging declines in casualties has happened in accidents involving riding on or "hitching on" to vehicles, the highway safety experts declare. Against 402 fatalities of this type in 1930 there were only 60 in 1950. There were only 2,100 injuries in this type of accident in 1950, compared with 5,610 in 1930, indicating that schools and parents have educated children against the dangerous practices of "seading a ride" or hitching a sled or play wagon to an automobile.

MORE EFFICIENCY IS OF GREAT AID TO THE HOME-MAKER

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

With more women going into defense work there will be less time for tasks at home. This will mean more efficiency in doing household work to keep homes running smoothly and family members happy.

When work takes you outside the home, make homemaking a team job and let every one in the family help. When each one assumes responsibility for his or her own picking up, it reduces the amount of straightening up one person must do.

Other suggestions for improving efficiency are: Study each task to see if there is an easier, quicker way of doing the job satisfactorily. Have a place for everything. When through using an article or piece of equipment put it back in its proper place.

Another thing you can do is arrange a convenient filing system for the business of the home. You will save time when it is necessary to look up bills and receipts.

Plan meals in advance and post menus on a bulletin board or where they can be seen easily. This makes it possible for any member of the family to start preparing the meal when it is time. When you plan meals in advance, you will find it easier to make out your shopping list and do your marketing.

Buy with great care. Check with the salesman to see that you are getting the kind of article you want. Returning articles for exchange takes time and energy.

That Last Touch Of Grooming

Choose a special perfume, one that's yours alone, always you. A few drops of fragrance on your furs will last a long time.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF a woman is a bit bewildered as to what perfume she should wear, let her purchase several of those tiny little purse containers. They are a good buy and will give her a chance to try out different scents without investing in larger vials.

Because the chemistry of each person's skin may slightly change the character of perfume, test the fragrant liquid on your skin before making a purchase. Scents are funny that way. Friction a few drops on the back of your hand, wait a few minutes until the alcoholic content has evaporated, then take a long, deep breath. If it has an appeal it will make you feel like a million dollars.

Perfume is the last touch when grooming. Friends and acquaintances you meet will enjoy it, will tell you that you "smell sweet" and you will know that you have found your own personal fragrance.

By carrying a purse-size vial you can give yourself a retouch just as you retouch your lips or powder the impertinent nose. It is senseless of women to always expect perfume "to last." Saleswomen at perfume counters get pretty tired hearing about that. Other things don't last. Why should perfume?

Use an Atomizer

Toilet waters are of reasonable price. Keep yours in an atomizer, spray your neck and shoulders. Bath salts not only soften the water but a little of their fragrance will cling to your skin. Sachets are remarkably inexpensive. Tuck them in coat pockets. Pin them in your brassiere. Place them in dresser drawers. Put them on coat and dress hangers.

Cool scents are best for summer, of course. In cold weather you can use a heavier aroma. A few drops on furs will keep on the job for a long time. Woolens have a way of making perfumes work longer, too. But don't tip the bottle on your silk frock; it may leave a stain, especially on light-colored fabrics.

NEWS OF SCHOOLS IN AREA---

All public, private and parochial schools in the Bristol area are invited to send news items for publication in this column which appears frequently.

Pennsbury High School

Saturday evening, the Senior class of Pennsbury High School presented the Senior Ball. This semi-formal affair was held in the Pennsbury High gymnasium, and was quite an honor for the seniors, because it is the first dance ever to be held in the new school.

Committees for the ball included: Decorations, Jeff Watts, chairman; tickets, Janet Dansbury, chairman; refreshments, Vivian Drews, chairman, and publicity, Patricia Taylor, chairman.

The faculty advisors for the ball were Miss Pearl Ronkin, Miss Isabelle Creagmile, and Mrs. Helen Hill.

Several new cheerleaders have been added to the Pennsbury High varsity cheering squad. They are: Marye Fuller, Veronica Krueger, Mary June Stryker and Gail Matlack.

Going to press this week is the 1952 Pennsman, yearbook of Pennsbury High School, Yardley. Co-editors are Chris Wiegand and Don Williams.

All art work which has been done by Helen Sheperd and Chris Wiegand, centers around the falcon, school emblem.

An important feature of the book will be the photography which, with the exception of the senior pictures, has been handled entirely by students under the direction of photography editor, Anthony Ragolia, and faculty advisor, Arthur Krespach. All developing and printing of pictures has also been done by the students.

The cover will be metallic silver in color with blue over-tones.

The staff of this year's book have had to do much more work than previous staffs since to save money they undertook to lay out the book to the last detail and figure copy count for themselves.

The business members have to date secured 21 pages of advertising and 350 subscriptions.

Members of the 1952 Pennsman editorial staff are: Anthony Scancella, make-up editor; "Rod" Patton, reporter; Nadya Freidl, senior editor; and Helen Shepherd, art editor.

Bensalem Township

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 29—As of the beginning of the 1951-1952 school year, the elementary division of the Bensalem Township Schools have secured the part-time services of a physical education instructor.

The teacher, John Messinger, is also on the faculty of the high school where he has charge of the safety education program. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, Mr. Messinger teaches games activities in the grades of the upper division of the elementary schools. His time is evenly divided among the schools at Andalusia, Cornwells Heights, Penn Valley and Trevose.

Believing that physical education is an integral part of a child's education, the school administration initiated this type of program for the benefit of the elementary children. The type of games and activities naturally depends upon the age group.

Mr. Messinger is of the opinion that the teaching of skills and good sportsmanship is of more importance than the actual learning of the major sports. The children look forward to Mr. Messinger's visits. He has supervised activities for playground as well as a store of ideas for indoor games during periods of inclement weather.

Through the work of Mr. Messinger the children have learned to appreciate the value of physical education instruction and to realize the significance of a healthy mind and body.

Wayne Engle, a sophomore elementary education student at Danbury Teachers College, Danbury, Connecticut, is spending the college interim program in Bensalem Township where he is working under the supervision of Mrs. Elsie Morgan, elementary supervisor.

The interim program of Danbury Teachers College is a three week period when underclassmen leave the college and engage in work experiences where they will gain valuable experience that they wouldn't otherwise gain in the classroom. Mr. Engle has spent time observing the methods and techniques of teachers in the school district.

Mr. Engle, a 1950 graduate of Bensalem High School, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester F. Engle, of Andalusia. At Danbury, Mr. Engle is editor-in-chief of the campus newspaper, The Couirer, on the staff of the college yearbook, and a member of the executive committee of the Sophomore Class.

Mr. Engle's previous interim experience was with the Children's Department of the Danbury Library.

Pupils in the sixth grade of Miss Isabelle McCoy, Trevose School, are engaged in a very interesting social studies project stated, "How the Geography of South America Has Affected Man's Way of Living."

The thirty-five pupils of the class are divided into several groups, each having a specific topic on which to report. Time is given to the pupils during the week to work on these reports.

By means of pupil maps, drawings and charts, as well as pictures from periodicals, the children hope to learn a great deal about their South American neighbors. Pupils are even going so far as to model from clay, various articles and tools of this continent. The building of the native huts is also on the agenda.

Sixth grade Trevose pupils cannot help but be well-informed on every day happenings—locally, national and international! As part of their daily program, pupils hear about the current news topics of the day. Students bring in the daily papers and from them they keep abreast of world events.

Recently, the exploits of Captain Carson and the snow-bound streamliner, "City of San Francisco," were studied in their entirety. Pictures were posted on the blackboard and daily the latest photos were added to the collection.

The Too-Thin Gal Isn't Pretty

Courtesy Warner Brothers

Not too slim, not too plump, just right! That's Movie Star Virginia Mayo, whose figure skinny girls can envy.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SLENDERNESS seems, these days, to be synonymous with beauty. The plump girl deplores her budges, and well she might. She can delete them if she will stop feeding her fat cells, live on a diet that is fairly free of fats, sweets and starches. It just means a little self denial, not going weak-kneed when the chocolate eclairs are passed, being content with fruit in place of rich desserts.

But you can't be beautiful and be too thin either. The body must not display a bony prominence—sharp elbows, scrawny neck, collar bones that form little shelves. The skinny girl is far from the ideal. She usually lives on nervous energy. She should stoke up on substantial viands that will put fat on her ribs. Stick legs are nothing to rave about. She can develop the muscles by walking tippy-toe, high kicking, riding a bicycle, dancing.

Outdoor Exercise

Nearly always the emaciated girl is pale and has hollow cheeks. A quart of milk a day and mild outdoor exercise will help bring her to normal weight. Often she has moist palms and cold feet which show that she needs more outdoor life, should air-condition her lungs so the blood streams will travel more briskly.

She can improve facial contour by the right kind of massage. A heavy cream should be used to nourish delicate tissues. It should be applied on a clean skin surface, remain on overnight when the flesh will lap it up.

Fill Out Cheeks

To make the cheeks fill out, place creamed fingers and thumbs outspread over those areas. Bring fingers and thumb together, drawing out the trumpeter's muscles; then, with the thumb—which is placed on the lower part of the cheek—lift the flesh upward. These movements should be followed by a brisk tapping and slapping. It is surprising how a few minutes of massage will bring good coloring. It also has a refining influence if the pores are coarse.

Miss Skinny should get plenty of sleep. That is when Nature rebuilds and recharges energy batteries, you know.

Educators Discuss A Number of Bills

had been completed. Since assessments had been turned in to the county assessment board on Sept. 1st, many houses, stores, factories have been constructed, it was pointed out. Under Act 544 any property can be assessed for a percentage of the fiscal year. It was felt by the educators that such a bill should have been enacted several years ago. It was pointed out that most districts will be re-assessed now, so that the tax can be paid for this year.

House Bill 163 was also discussed. This bill permits the setting up of local municipal authorities and giving them the same state re-imbursement as received under the state authority.

The superintendents and principals also considered Act 472, which cares for new state appropriation to schools. They discussed how such would affect the schools. In general, it means districts which operate jointly will receive more state aid for elementary schools and less for secondary schools.

ANGRY CHESS

VIENNA — (INS) — Passionate chess-players are the most belligerent people in the world. This astounding disclosure was made by Heinrich Mueller, an Austrian handwriting expert who claims to have made a life-long study of chess-players' handwritings.

CHECKED GUN

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — A youth recently checked a revolver along with his hat at the Tip Top Cafe in Philadelphia. Mary Docherty, the hat check girl, accepted the weapon and called the police. Next day the checker, Sam McCauley, found himself under $500 bail for toting a gun without a permit.

Urges Bucks Juniors To Strengthen Their Clubs

LANGHORNE, Jan. 29—The Juniors of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs held a president's council, Thursday evening, in Langhorne community house. Presidents and committee chairmen from nine clubs were present. Mrs. E. Wilmer Fisher, Morrisville, president of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Russell Willoughby, Morrisville; Mrs. Ralph Robinson, Chalfont; and Mrs. J. P. Perry, Furlong, were guests.

Miss Joanne B. Gallagher, third vice-president, Bucks Co. Federation, introduced Mrs. Fisher, who urged the juniors to strengthen their clubs. "With the great influx in population in the county there are many opportunities for expanding," she reminded.

"Youth in the Comunity" was the main topic. The juniors are helping the youth towards their future. Almost all the clubs sponsor Girl Scout and Brownie troops and take an active part in their activities by being troop leaders. One club sponsors a Cub Scout troop as well as Girl Scouts.

Several of the clubs are active in youth center work by chaperoning 'teen-age dances, running canteens and snack bars, and teaching arts and crafts. Many of the clubs are working in cooperation with schools, trying to establish free kindergartens or buying playground or other necessary equipment. The juniors of Bucks County have a scholarship fund available to high school girls in the county, and thus help worthwhile students with a college education they might not otherwise get.

Labor Day is the only national holiday recognized by Congressional action.

THE GUEST OF GOD

"O Lord, who shall sojurn in your tent?
Who shall dwell on your holy mountain?
He who walks blamlessly and does justice:
who thinks the truth in his heart
and slanders not with his tongue;
Who harms not his fellow man, nor takes up a reproach against his neighbor;
By whom the reprobate is despised,
while he honors those who fear the Lord;
Who, though it be to his loss, changes not his pledged word,
who lends not his money at usury
and accepts no bribe against the innocent.
He who does these things shall never be disturbed."

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

HERE is a Sunday dinner of veal stew with dumplings recommended by the A & P Service for Homemakers to fill economy and palate appeal requirements.

Roll two pounds of boneless stewing veal, cut bite size, in seasoned flour. Brown in three tablespoons of fat in heavy kettle. Add three sliced onions, one teaspoon of dried marjoram, three cups of water and the liquid drained from two No. 2 cans of peas. Bring to boil. Cover, and simmer one and one-half hours.

Add six sliced carrots and simmer one-half hour longer, or until carrots and meat are tender. Season to taste.

For the dumplings, sift three cups of cake flour, three teaspoons of baking powder and one and one-fourth teaspoons of salt. Cut in two tablespoons of shortening. Add two tablespoons of chopped parsley and one cup of milk. Mix until flour is moistened. Drop from tablespoon into boiling stew. Cover and simmer 15 minutes.

For vegetables, cook two cups of potatoes, cut in pieces, until tender. Drain and add to drained peas. Heat and season.

Chose your own dessert, but for a salad, try this peach-gelatin combination: Drain juice from one No. 2 can of sliced peaches. Add enough water to juice to make two cupsful. Add one tablespoon each of sugar and vinegar, dash of salt and two whole cloves. Tie one-half teaspoon cracked cinnamon in a small piece of cheesecloth and drop into mixture. Bring to boil and simmer ten minutes. Remove spices. Pour mixture over one package of orange-flavored gelatin dessert. Stir until dissolved. Add peaches. Chill until firm in refrigerator tray, then slice and arrange on salad greens. Serve with cottage cheese and dressing.

Bristol is one game behind Morrisville High in the battle for the Lower Bucks County crown. Morrisville is undefeated in four times out while Bristol has lost one and captured three games.

Coach Johnny Messinger is depending upon Bob Whitfield, Russ Struble, Joe Mikelatis, Harry Robinson, and Bob Elliott to lead his team to a triumph.

Morrisville will play George School on its home court, while Pennsbury High will be host to Bordentown High.

HOUSES AND PEOPLE

HERE'S A HOME that shows what an architect chooses when it's time to pick a house for himself. It's Royal Barry Wills' home in Melrose, Mass. Mr. Wills, who finds house planning and people fun, tells his adventures in a new book, "Houses Have Funny Bones."

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

IT'S true what they say about meeting such interesting people in the newspaper business. One of them is Royal Barry Wills who, while not a member of the fourth estate, has managed to meet plenty of interesting people on his own.

They march through the pages of his new book, "Houses Have Funny Bones," in amusing array. They are painters, carpenters, clients, of course, and all the other people that help make the adventures of an architect entertaining, especially an architect who has a good sense of humor and a lively imagination.

Royal Barry Wills

A BRICKLAYER with a big stomach can leave his mark on a chimney, as this sketch illustrates.

Probably nobody but Mr. Wills would know a bricklayer like Luigi Pasquadoro, who had trouble building chimneys. His stomach stuck out so far that inadvertently he leaned against the chimney while the mortar was still soft. As a result, most of his chimneys had a curved contour the exact shape of Luigi's stomach.

Then there was the husky driver who appeared at the Wills home one day with a truck loaded with an entire Colonial staircase that Mr. Wills had bought from an old house in Gloucester. It was purchased on the promise that it would be stored in a wrecking yard until needed, but the driver would have none of carting it back. Instead, he dropped it on the front lawn, letting it lean against a tree, where it stayed until neighbors complained about its elephantine proportions.

When it comes to clients, Mr. Wills has had more than his share of unusual ones. A favorite was Mr. Damon, a bit queer and more than a bit absent-minded. He would decide to take a bath, turn the faucets on full force and then go off to do something else, forgetting completely about the running water. As a result, the hall ceiling, directly below, had fallen four times.

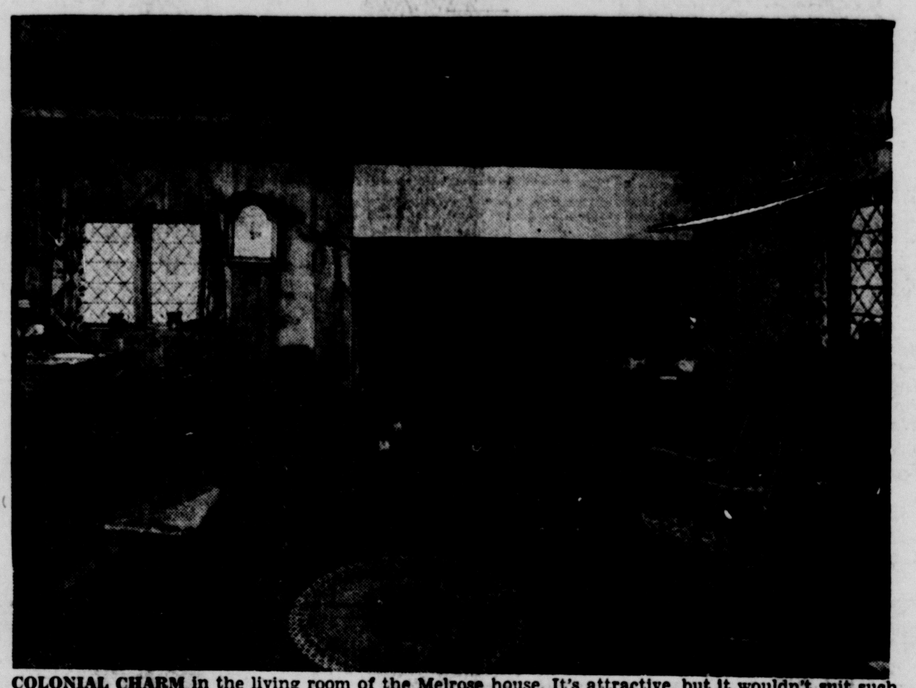

His wife finally hit on a solution. Before having the ceiling replastered, she had a carpenter bore several small holes in through the bathroom floor. Little pipes were inserted in these so that the bathtub overflow might run down into the hall without spoiling the ceiling. As an afterthought, she stored a mop and pail in the hall closet.

It was a fine idea until one Saturday when the bathtub overflowed through the pipes just as five of Mrs. Damon's old cronies from the Women's Guild ambled into the hallway and were drenched.

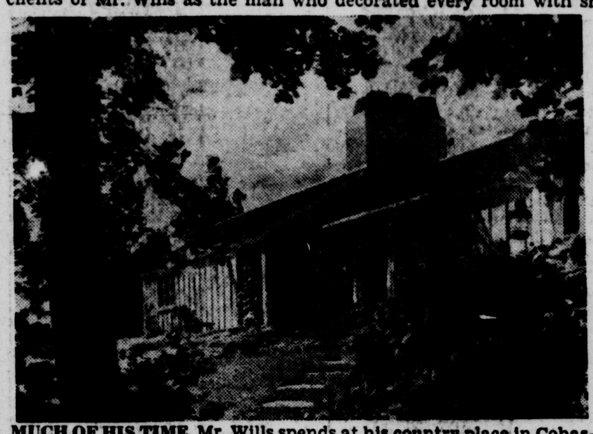

Another wealthy client thought the cost of painting the exterior of a house was too expensive, so she decided to do it herself. When it was time to paint the upper story, her chauffeur rigged a bosun's chair and hoisted her some twenty feet in the air, while he held onto a rope to keep her aloft.

These are only a few of the countless characters you'll find in "Houses Have Funny Bones," a book that people with funny bones are sure to enjoy. The amusing text is illustrated with gay little sketches by Mr. Wills, one of which is reproduced here.

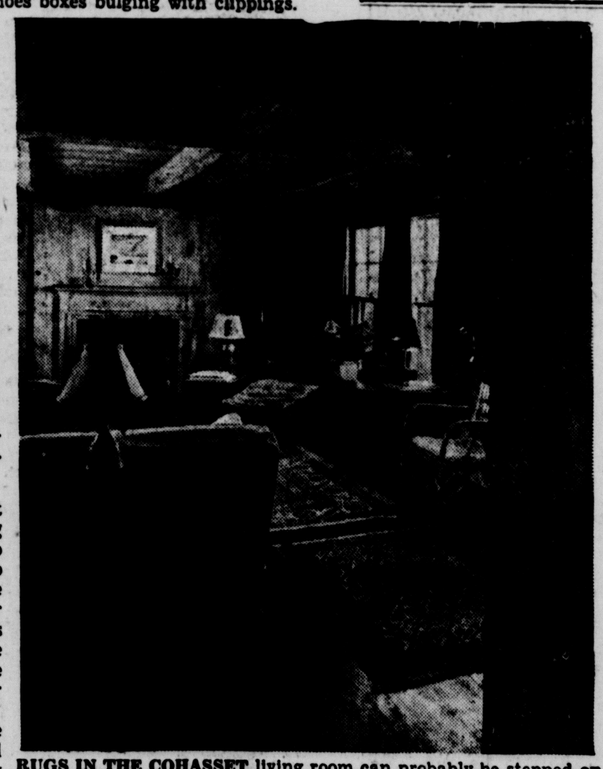

The book should be available at your local book shop; if not they can order it for you.

COLONIAL CHARM in the living room of the Melrose house. It's attractive, but it wouldn't suit such clients of Mr. Wills as the man who decorated every room with shoes boxes bulging with clippings.

MUCH OF HIS TIME, Mr. Wills spends at his country place in Cohasset, Mass., where a huge staircase was once left on the front lawn.

RUGS IN THE COHASSET living room can probably be stepped on safely. Mr. Wills once slipped on a rug, fell through the floor.

Bristol Farmer Has High Tomato Yield

Third highest tomato yield in the entire state was grown by Lawrence Potter, R. D. 2, during 1951. According to Harry J. Garrison, Jr., 237 Green Lane, Potter has consistently been a better-than-average grower.

On 10 acres of good Bucks County land, this prize-winning tomato grower averaged 23.8 tons per acre with 69% of U. S. No. 1's. What does Potter say about his success this past season? "Plenty of cow manure and good weather was the answer," he murmurs modestly.

By trade, St. Paul was a tentmaker.

PIGTAIL STEAL

VIENNA—(INS)—A 20-year-old Vienna girl told police a masked man robbed her. But, she said, he didn't take any money—just her pigtails. Later the girl, Kathy Trawenger, confesesd this was a lie. Her conservative mother wouldn't allow her to wear a fashionable hair-do—and she had cut off the pigtails herself.
